STREET BEGGARS FINED

Judge Kimball Deals Promptly and Severely With Them.

POLICEMAN AS INTERPRETER

Jacob Kroepf Could Not Speak Eng-lish, But He Was Let Off-Work house Preparing for the Thanksgiving Entertainment-Profane Wom an Punished.

The procession of vagrants in Judge Kimball's court grows larger daily. The cold weather is driving them in from the suburbs, and last night the Municipal Lodging House and the Central Union Mission were crowded to their utmost capacity. In the business precincts the station houses were filled with free lodgers, and many poor wretches, cold and hungry, fell into the police dragmet while begging for a few pennies to secure them a warm, if not very clean, place in which to sleep.

Charles Ross, a ragged and travel-stained man about thirty-five years old, was argested by Policeman Oriani, and pleaded fully to being a vagrant.

"He was begging on the street," said the officer, "and I put him under arrest."

Ross had nothing to say, and the court imposed a sentence of thirty days in the workhouse.

Thomas Dillon, a young fellow, was arrested by Policeman Oriani on the same charge.
"He was on E street, your honor, and

"He was on E street, your honor, and struck several people for money."
"Sixty days," said the court.
"He wants to make a statement," same Bailiff Cole.

ep around, then," said Judge Kim-

"Judge," said the prisoner, "I have had kinda hard luck. I stopped in this town yesterday on my way home, and wanted to get a few pennies to get me a lodging. I'll leave today if you'll tet me go."
"I'll reduce the sentence to thirty days," replied the court, and the prisoner stepped back. COULD NOT SPEAK ENGLISH. Jacob Kroepf, an old German who couldn't speak a word of English, was next ar-raigned. Policeman Pasanau acted as speak a word of English, was next arraigned. Policeman Pasanau acted as his interpreter. He promised the court to continue on his way, and his personal bonds were taken. Jacob will never know what he is under bonds to do, however, as Clerk Happer's knowledge of the German language was not sufficient to enable him to use it in reading the bond.

Mit Carry, colored, wanted a goose for his Thanksgiving dinner, and his yearnings in that direction were responsible for his being arrested and charged as a suspicious character.

"Mit cutered the back yard of a gentlemau on my beat, your henor," said the officer, "and when the owner went out he had the goose by the neck. He said he wanted littor his Thanksgiving dinner."

"He will have to eat his Thanksgiving dinner in the workhouse," said the court. "Thirty days."

Joseph Rome, a native of Sunny Italy, was charged with disorderly conduct and profanity.

"He maks me curse, judge."

"He make me curse, judge."

"How did he make you curse?" asked Judge Kimball.

"He arresta me without right. I no do anything wrong."
The officer says you did. You're fined $10."
Mary Baytiss was the name of a woman charged with profanity. Policeman Kinneman testified that she with half a dozen other men and women were standing at the corner of Thirty-fourth and M streets, near the Aqueduct bridge, all very disorderly. Two men were on the bridge drunk, and when the officer started for them the woman cursed them and told then to get out of the way, the police were coming.

SHE DENIED IT.

"I'm workin' up above the Aqueduct Bridge, Judge, and was on my way home when this man arrested me. There were fifteen others around there, all men, but when this man arrested me. There were fifteen others around there, all men, but he wouldn't touch one of them. I didn't use such bad language as he says."

"How bad was the language you used?"
"Well, I did swear at the men."
"Ten dollars fine."
William Moore and Robert Fitzgibbons, young men, were arrested by Policemen Tracey and Emerson of the Ninth precinct, charged with disorderly conduct.
"There were eight or ten of these young men standing together on G street, your honse," said Tracey, and they were about to start a fight. These two had taken their coats off."
"I was on my way bome," said Moore, "and was just passing the crowd, when the officers caught me. Hadn't anything to do with the fight."
"I only stopped there about five minutes." said Fitzgibbons.
"Five dollars each."
Alfred Stewart, John Newton, Frank Allein, Lizzle Johnson, and Edward Tine, all pleaded guilty to the charges against them and were given the usual sentence.
